

Takeda, Masahiko

Professor, Asian Public Policy Program, School of International and Public Policy,
Hitotsubashi University

He has a wide experience in monetary policy and international finance. He worked at the Bank of Japan (1981-2002). He was seconded to the Bank for International Settlements (1989-1992). He served as Alternate Executive Director for Japan at the IMF (1998-1999), and then as a senior member of the IMF's European Department and the Asia and Pacific Department (2000-13).

At the IMF, he was closely involved in policy advice for many countries, including Australia, the Czech Republic, India, Israel, and the Philippines.

He received Ph.D. in Economics from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1988.

Fields of specialization: Macroeconomics, and International Finance